

Meet Skylar

Skylar struggles with Medicare policies that limit access to the type of wheelchair that best suits her life. She is an ambitious college student who dreams of helping others in the same situation once she graduates.

She told her story to People for Quality Care to advocate for policies that will make a difference. She spoke out for access to a home medical equipment provider of choice and for the equipment that works for her life.

QUALITY HOME CARE is under attack.

All Americans deserve
the right to top-quality medical equipment,
local service and timely, personalized care.

ACT NOW.

Advocating for seniors and people with disabilities who benefit from home care

Millions of Americans rely on medical equipment to live in their homes instead of hospitals, go to the grocery store, attend their grandchildren's ball games and enjoy life to its fullest.

People, like Larry, depend on local equipment providers to keep the equipment running, replace faulty parts, and show them what new technology is available to make life easier.

But changing Medicare and Medicaid policies are drastically cutting access to local providers and timely service.

From a "competitive" bidding program that limits access to a provider of choice to payment delays for equipment, quality home care is under attack.
